

Basic Income NOW

Craig Berggold is a leading advocate and nationally recognized campaigner for basic income, in particular organizing the arts community in it's overwhelming support for basic income. He is the co-author of a public letter to the Prime Minister calling for a basic income for all, and endorsed by artist unions and groups representing 75,000 members.

Joe Foster has had a variety of careers: in Montreal as an Electrical Engineer; as a volunteer with Cuso in Zambia; with UNDP in Malaysia; and with CIDA and External Affairs working in Developing Countries. His personal and observed experiences with poverty indicated that income insecurity is inexcusable. This has made him passionate about advocating for a Basic Income Guarantee.

Monika Ciolek is a former recipient of Ontario Works and the Basic Income Pilot Project 2018, currently living in Hamilton, Ontario. As a sole support parent, having had experience being on social assistance while working, volunteering and running a business, Monika is well acquainted with yesterday's welfare and disability systems' inability to provide meaningful futures for its recipients.
